

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to a method of forming a metal line in a semiconductor device, in which an etch-stopping layer is deposited between the interlayer insulation films and then over-etching is performed by using the 5 etch-stopping layer as an etching barrier during the etching process for forming the subsequent trenches. Therefore, it is possible to restrain occurrence of parasitic spacers in the trenches.